ESSENTIAL FUNCTIONS

Faculty Associate academic position teaching a course in the new Doctor of Behavioral Health (DBH) degree program in the School of Letters and Sciences. The DBH is an innovative new doctoral degree program designed to prepare masters degree, licensed behavioral clinicians for an upgrade to a doctoral degree focused on integrated behavioral care. The DBH program is designed to prepare the practitioner to function as a behavioral primary provider on an interdisciplinary medical team in all kinds of healthcare settings as we enter the new era in which behavioral health will be an integral and integrated part of the nation's healthcare system.

This posting is for the courses in Population-based Health Management (fall 2009) and Quality and Performance Measurement, Improvement, Incentives and Outcomes in Behavioral Health (spring 2010). The Population-based Health Management course will cover the design, delivery and evaluation of programs such as disease management, case management and health coaching. Topics will include case identification, intervention, process and outcome measurement and return on investment. The Quality and Performance Measurement course will cover common approaches to quality improvement in behavioral healthcare settings, trends in pay for performance incentives, and outcomes management as an integrated approach to demonstrating the value of behavioral health interventions in primary care.

The DBH program courses are hybrid residential and distance learning. The faculty will be responsible for preparing and delivering a lecture and supporting materials (slides, notes, assignments). The lecture will be recorded and viewed offline by distance students. The adjunct faculty will use Blackboard, OneNote and related ASU distance learning software. Responsibilities include course advising for students, writes and grades exams, papers, and problem assignments as needed by the course; Assists in reviewing and evaluating effectiveness of teaching methods and work activities; Maintains student grade records for assigned courses.
